And the Mouse doesn't move to-day either.

The submarine knows no nationality save its own.

Again we are reminded that the railroad track is a hazardous sidewalk.

The 22-horsepower Henry Ford seems to be running well to the front in Michigan politics.

The "little bad man from Egypt" proved an alibi in the Waite case in New York and has been allowed to vanish in thin air.

Until further notice we shall leave it in type: "Villa has escaped"—dead, gone, vanished, eloped, whatever you are of a mind to call it.

Richford won't be outdone by the other up-and-doing towns of Vermont but will have a new high school structure. Another progressive town!

Villa declines to attend a rummage sale in St. Johnsbury this week. Meanwhile the American troops are keeping him in a rummage all by himself down in Mexico.

The published pictures of General Pershing and his staff in their field uniforms remind one of the German staff in uniform—they are so different. However, the American uniform looks extremely serviceable.

The German chancellor's announcement that his country has no intention of invading the United States will, no doubt, be a sad disappointment to a few Hyphens in the United States who have been just spoiling for a fight.

A great deal of saving to the state of Vermont might be effected by the condensing of the annual and biennial reports of many officials; and the determination of about a score of officials, after a recent conference in Montpellier, to prune their writings as much as they can without sacrificing clearness of ideas is a move toward retrenchment that will find hearty support among most of the people of Vermont.

Carroll S. Page joins his senatorial colleague, William P. Dillingham, in the announcement that he will not be candidate for delegate from Vermont to the Republican national convention in Chicago this year. These announcements pave the way for some of the "younger guard" of the party in Vermont.

The detailed statements which the postoffice department at Washington requires newspapers to make every six months is a great revealer of secrets of the counting-room, not the least of which is the bona fide circulation of the newspapers. Advertisers who appreciate the value of a wide and fairly stable circulation of prospective advertising mediums will find much interesting information every six months in those sworn statements. The figures to be sworn are the net sales, that is, minus the returned papers, etc. The comparative statements show which are the more valuable advertising mediums.

We hope some of the enterprising communities of Vermont—Barre and Bennington, for instance—will note that the postoffice business of this bailiwick has passed that of Rutland, and ranks second only to Burlington among Vermont towns and cities.—Brattleboro Reformer.

We don't know how Bennington is situated, but we know that Barre people are too busy making monuments for Brattleboro people who die of hand cramp through writing letters for office. Perhaps that explains why Brattleboro's postal business exceeds that of Barre and now goes ahead of Rutland. Nevertheless, neighbor, you have some distinction and we trust you will squeeze all the satisfaction possible out of it.

WHAT WE SHOULD PROTECT.

When one stops to consider that hundreds of thousands of dollars, even a million or more, have been invested in buildings and equipment for the manufacture of Barre granite, the conviction grows that the property is entitled to as much protection from fire as this small municipality is able to furnish. The loss of an average granite plant means the wiping out of $25,000 to $50,000; it means a complete stoppage of orders for that firm for many months; it means the throwing out of employment of several scores of men, many of them with families to support in the long period of idleness until the plant is replaced or a job is found elsewhere; it means a certain dead loss to the manufacturer. We have seen the well-nigh paralyzing effect of frequent fires on the granite industry in some other communities. Barre cannot afford to let the proper protection of all its granite plants go by default; and Barre will not permit such a course. The first consideration is to make such changes in water mains as will give reasonable hose pressure.

CURRENT COMMENT

Judge Weeks' Candidacy.

The announcement that Judge Weeks will be a candidate for lieutenant governor is very gratifying to his neighbors and friends in Addison county, where he has spent all his life and where he is honored and trusted as is the privilege of few men. His popularity was shown in the flattering majorities by which he was twice elected representative. His ability was proved by his conduct in the speaker's chair. Many great men of Vermont have occupied that chair, but none have left it with greater honor or more general and hearty good will than Judge Weeks. Modest, unselfish and unassuming, yet forceful and resolute when need be, anticipating shrewdly every situation and averting trouble before it comes. Judge Weeks is almost an ideal man to preside over a Vermont deliberative assembly. He is more than fair to those who differ with him and is always patient until the right course is clear. Addison county will support him with enthusiasm and it would not be strange if his fitness for the place was so generally recognized that his nomination will be early assured.—Middlebury Register.

Did You See the Scramble?

The Opening of the Great Sale at THE VAUGHAN STORE, BARRE, VT.

A real sensation at this store since the opening of the Great Sale of All Sales. My store is simply a sea of people. The next few days will bring greater crowds. No such crowds, and no such real bargains ever known in the city of Barre.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

That wonderful feature, "My Madonna," featuring Olga Petrova, will be shown at the Park theatre to-night. Don't fail to see this. Same prices. Seats on sale at 6:30.

Robert, a poor artist, has a vision of a wonderful Madonna. He seeks a model vainly, until he meets, accidentally, the beautiful Lucille, a woman of the demimonde. She is drawn to the shabby artist and forsaking her fashionable acquaintances, goes to pose for him. The two fall in love and Robert paints a wonderful picture of the Madonna, using Lucille as his model.

Unknown to Robert, Lucille persuades an art merchant she knows to purchase the picture, which speedily brings Robert fame and fortune. The artist and his model are married, but with the access of wealth Robert grows cold in his devotion.

Robert meets the baroness, a woman of the world, who comes to sit for her portrait, and spends most of his leisure with her. Later he meets the baron, her husband, who has known Lucille before her marriage, and is delighted at Robert's interest in his wife, to whom he is quite indifferent, because he thinks he can thus win Lucille's affections.

Robert comes to keep an appointment with the baron at his house and finds him lying dead in the hall, having just been killed by a workman whom he had wronged. He picks up the knife with which the crime has been committed just as the baroness and her servants enter. Convinced that he is responsible for the death of her husband, the baroness accuses Robert. He is convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Lucille, whose devotion to Robert remains undiminished, and who resolutely believes in his innocence, becomes a charity worker, devoting her wealth and talents to the poor. A dying workman confesses to her his guilt in the death of the baron and Lucille takes his deathbed statement in the presence of a notary and the police officials.

Robert is freed, but does not seek his wife, believing that she no longer cares for him. Broken in spirit, he goes to the church for consolation where his painting of the Madonna is hung, seeking solace for his hungry heart in viewing the portrait of Lucille. There the two meet and are reunited before the Madonna.—adv.

JINGLES AND JESTS

Patient—Doctor, would you just as soon have a web foot put on that wooden leg?
 Doctor—Why so, my man?
 Patient—So I can still keep the water from flowing into the overflow pipe when I take a bath.—Michigan Gargoyle.

Difficult.

Indignant Professor—Quit this quibbling, sir! Who was King Henry VIII?
 Answer—"yes" or "no."—Pennsylvania Punch Bowl.

The Papers.

Villain—Where are those papers?
 First Assistant Villain—In the blacksmith shop.
 Villain—Ha, ha—I suppose being forged.
 First Assistant—No, being filed!—Gargoyle.

Distinguished.

One—Is Mat distinguished looking in his new suit?
 Two—Is he? Why, people often stop him in the street and ask him to change a ten.—Yale Record.

"They say," remarked the spinster boarder, "that the woman who hesitates is lost."
 "Lost is not the proper word for it," growled the fussy old bachelor at the pedestal extremity of the table. "She's extinct."—Indianapolis Star.

A Beauty Show.

Aunt—Your bride, my dear boy, is wealthy and all that, but I don't think she'll make much of a beauty show at the altar.
 Nephew—You don't, eh? Just wait till you see her with the bridesmaids she has selected.—Nashville Tennessean.

81 Drop Forgings in the 1916 Indian

DROP forgings alone—costly to make as they are—meet Indian ideals of strength and stamina where durability and strength are most needed. They are used because they are tougher than castings and more dependable than stampings.

Indian is called the all-drop-forging machine because it has more drop forgings than any other motorcycle made.

81 of these Samson pieces in the Indian make a machine which withstands, with smallest wear and operating cost, the hardest tests to which a motorcycle can be subjected.

Automobile engineers, who have studied the Indian and Indian manufacturing methods, marvel at the expensiveness and fineness of Indian construction, for it is built like a high grade motor car.
